Course Description:

What is performed art and how do artists create theatrical events? What qualities are inherent in the artistic process of making theatre? What choices are individual artists making to contribute to the results? How are these performances imagined, realized, and received by audiences? What value does the work of theatre artists hold in our culture and why is it important to our future? This course examines the characteristics of performed theatrical art and the collaborative process of bringing artistic inspiration to production.

About Theatre Appreciation:

This course satisfies the university's general education Exploring Perspectives: Artist and former Tier Two Arts course requirements. There is no prerequisite. The emphasis in this course is on the study of theatre as an art form through its production and impact on audiences.

Warning: This course may contain material that includes explicit language, depictions of nudity, sexual situations, and violence.

Course Objectives:

Contextualize the impact of historical, cultural, and personal factors on the creation and reception of artistic, dramatic, and theatrical works.

Identify key theoretical concepts and standard conventions that apply to the artist's creation, production, and reception of any produced and performed theatrical event.

Demonstrate the standard collaborative process employed by theatrical artists in order to create a performed event for audiences.

Communicate effectively in writing and discussion through an informed interpretation and appropriate evaluation of theatrical works and their impact on audiences and our culture using written discussion, feedback assignments, a formally presented creative project from the artist's perspective, and a critical response to a production.

Apply the perspective of the artist in order to reflect, evaluate, and draw conclusions on the collaborative process practiced in the creation and production of theatrical performances.

Writing Attribute

Student Learning Objective: Students will demonstrate rhetorical awareness and writing proficiency by writing for a variety of contexts and executing disciplinary genre conventions of organization, design, style, mechanics, and citation format while reflecting on their writing development.

Course Modules and Materials

IMPORTANT: In order to access the internet links and supplementary materials that are included within Modules and Lessons, you should download each Module to your computer before you begin.

Our D2L course website at the university will include all curriculum, announcements, assigned viewings and readings, documents and guidelines, posted grades, access to tests and more. Completion of all modules, quizzes, activities, projects, papers, and exams before the deadlines listed on the course schedule (included at end of syllabus) is required in order to successfully finish the course.

If you are experiencing technical issues with D2L access or glitches with materials on the site, notify D2L and our teaching team prior to any required deadline for assistance.

Modules contain learning objectives and study questions. Use these elements to align your study and notes with our course curriculum. Important vocabulary and critical course concepts appear in bold typeface for focus, reference, and study. In order to maintain equitable class progress, Modules will be made available each week as the term progresses and as assigned on the syllabus.

Take notes, reflect, and consider the study questions carefully and deliberately attempt to interact with all materials as you work with the modules.

Video and Viewing

Some course curriculum requires viewing performances, documentary topics, websites, and more. Follow the detailed instructions provided with each module to help you locate and access the assigned selections and segments.

Our videos may recommend that you use Firefox or Chrome, rather than Safari, to view.

Participation in Topics

Participation in all assigned and posted discussion topics, Introductions, Q &A, mingling in the lobby, and collaboration with course colleagues in this format is a requirement of the course.

Final participation points for the semester are awarded based on the summary of D2L interaction and activities that you participated with and completed this semester before

Tuesday December 5. See the syllabus for the breakdown of points allocated for this component.

There are many components in the course that all students have the requirement and opportunity to interact with, including screenings, videos, modules, module assignments, submissions, discussions, assessments, and more. D2L keeps track of exactly how much you engaged with and completed these elements. The percentage of your completion and interactivity with the elements will determine your participation points. If interested, you can view your progress through the log out tab to see the percentage of completed activities on your record.

Creative Project

Project Title Choices Guidelines and the Guidelines for the actual project are available under "Content." This is a Creative Project of a play that you will select, read, research, and study. All play titles MUST BE SELECTED FROM THE LIST OF APPROVED TITLES (see Project Title Choices Guidelines) and approved by the deadline. Titles will be assigned to any student who misses the title choice submission deadline.

Approved plays are available via the "Twentieth Century North American Drama" database located under "Library Tools."

Upon receiving the graded feedback for the first Creative Project submission, you may elect to resubmit that paper for a final evaluation. To resubmit the paper, use the appropriate submission folder under assignments and see the syllabus schedule for the revised submission due date.

Assignments

Four (4) assignments include posts on discussions and, for three of the assignments, attaching Word documents to the discussion threads. Submissions are required as detailed by the course instructions and completed as instructed in course modules and materials and scheduled due as listed on the syllabus schedule.

Quizzes

Three (3) quizzes will be conducted throughout the course and must be completed by the deadline as scheduled. Quizzes Two and Three are timed and must be completed in twenty minutes or less.

Tests

Two (2) written tests will be completed and one (1) multiple-choice test will be completed as scheduled during the course. Test 1 will be a short answer response format covering material up to and including A Raisin in the Sun; Test 2 is a cumulative midterm Multiple Choice test; and Test 3 covers the work of designers (Module VII) and the required production of Oklahoma! with short and long answer written responses.

Utilize all course resources for your test responses. These tests are provided fifty minutes to complete.

Response Paper

One critical Response Paper will be generated and utilized to demonstrate your level of mastery over course content and is considered a culminating assignment for the course. This response paper will be written for Twelfth Night, the production option for the class provided via D2L (under Response Paper)

Guidelines for completing the Response Paper are available under “Content.”

Final Exam

A comprehensive multiple-choice exam will be completed at the end of the course. The final exam will be timed and you will not be allowed to “go back” to previous pages on the exam.
